

adoption event featuring same-day adoption services in March, which drew around 50 visitors and gave three dogs and two cats new families.

Considering DHA's long history of service in Sussex County, it only makes sense for this Rehoboth location to have been made a reality. This center seeks to work with other organizations such as the local Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA), cat rescue groups, and local businesses. The Rehoboth center was built with the community at the center, and through its various successes has already shown to be a valuable member of the community at large.

Since first coming to Delaware in 1957, DHA has connected thousands of pets with loving families. Now with the Rehoboth location, DHA can look forward to further uniting the animal-loving community with a direct, permanent outreach in Sussex County. Speaking again of the main goal of this satellite facility, Patrick Carroll said, "We are delighted to say that that initial goal has been met, now, we look forward to doing even more for our friends with sandy paws and those individuals that will become our 'friends for life.'" The Rehoboth facility's hours of operation are Saturday and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. and weekdays from 12 p.m. to 5 p.m., they are closed Wednesdays. For more information on pet adoption, visit DelawareHumane.org/Rehoboth.

State Chamber Website Awarded First Place in Delaware Press Association Contest

» The Delaware State Chamber of Commerce is excited to share that its website, www.dsc.com, won a first-place award from the Delaware Press Association (DPA). The website, newly rebranded and unveiled in June of 2017, was entered in the Nonprofit, Government or Educational Website category of the DPA's annual Professional Communications Contest. The State Chamber's print publication, Delaware Business magazine, earned an honorable mention.

The annual DPA Professional Communications Contest, open to all professional communicators in Delaware, encourages and rewards excellence in communication. The contest provides an opportunity to compete in various print and electronic broadcasting fields, and is judged by out-of-state communications professionals to ensure impartiality. All DPA contest winners will be honored at the DPA Annual Meeting and Contest Awards Banquet in May. First-place winners who are members of the National Federation of Press Women (NFPW) may enter a subsequent national competition.

The revamped www.dsc.com was designed to deliver an improved user experience, more visual impact and more intuitive content navigation. The State Chamber was pleased to present the public with the new look and user experience, created with its members and partners in mind. New features of the site included advocacy resources, such as a 'Find Your Legislator' tool, bill search, district maps, and the 2017 Legislative Roster; the DSCC Job Bank for posting both career opportunities and job-seeker resumes; and a membership directory to connect users with businesses throughout the state.

The State Chamber thanks the DPA for organizing the competition and congratulates all its fellow award winners on their achievements.
