Guide to Higher Education

Springfield College's Humanics Philosophy

BY ASHLEY SEMPOWSKI, ASSISTANT DIRECTOR FOR RECRUITMENT AND OUTREACH AT SPRINGFIELD COLLEGE WILMINGTON

SPRINGFIELD COLLEGE School for Professional and Continuing Studies has been a presence in Wilmington for 21 years. Offering in-demand academic programs for the working adult in both bachelor's and master's degrees in human service related fields, we are dedicated to creating and educating change agents in our community. Our mission is to provide broadly accessible higher education in human services for adult learners that embodies the principles of humanics, community partnership, and academic excellence to achieve social and economic justice. Current degree programs include criminal justice, early childhood education, substance use disorder counseling, community and youth development, as well as graduate programs in mental health counseling and nonprofit management. Students can transfer in undergraduate credit for prior college coursework as well as work and life experiences, and can complete their degree in as little as 16 to 24 months. Classes are adult-focused and flexible, using a hybrid format of some weekend or weeknight courses supplemented with online learning, so students can pursue their education without disrupting their work or family life. A key component of our human service curriculum is the "Humanics Philosophy," which calls for educating the whole person in mind, body, and spirit for leadership in service to others. In addition to the general curriculum, Springfield students go out into their communities to identify a need or a problem, then address that problem in group project courses as a cohort. We are expanding our academic offerings to include new undergraduate programs in psychology and business in the near future, a graduate program in organizational management and leadership, as well as fully online degree options to maximize flexibility for our working adult students. Contact Springfield College Wilmington today to see how we can help you empower yourself so that you may empower others and your community! ■
